Joseph & the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat

Circa '21 Dinner Playhouse

Wednesday, January 13 through Saturday, March 20

Like the swallows to Capistrano, you can count on Ann Nieman to make an annual return to the Circa '21 Dinner Playhouse, as the Texas-based director has helmed each of the venue's January productions since 2005. And 2010 finds her returning for one of Circa '21's most popular titles in Joseph & the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat, which Nieman last staged for the theatre five years ago, and which was noteworthy for being the last Circa '21 production to feature a certain local Arts Editor amongst its cast. Modesty forbids mentioning who that is, exactly, but ... .

Oh, screw it. It was me. I was in it. It was awesome.

As you likely know, Joseph ... is a Biblical tale of a prophetic man, his 11 siblings, and his multi-colored coat, as interpreted by Jesus Christ Superstar's Andrew Lloyd Webber and Tim Rice. As you probably also know, the show blends rock, country-Western, reggae, and traditional show-tune stylings, and manages to pull off this feat while running less than 90 minutes.

But did you know just how insane with talent Circa '21's latest is? Joseph is being played by Don Denton, the excellent lead from the theatre's The Full Monty. The role of the Narrator is being sung by Jennifer Stone, outstanding in the venue's recent Holly Jolly Christmas.

And the ensemble features a host of gifted Circa '21 veterans: Tristan Tapscott, Steve Lasiter, Liz J. Millea, Justin Droegemueller, Bret Churchill, Elizabeth Miller, Joseph Baez, Adam Ioele, and Tom Walljasper, Andrea Moore, and Nick Madson - the latter three reprising their roles from 2005's production. Those lucky jerks.

But don't let my pathological jealousy ruin your good time. Joseph & the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat runs January 13 through March 20, and tickets are available by calling (309)786-7733 extension 2 or visiting Circa21.com
