Texas Hippy Coalition

Rock Island Brewing Company

Tuesday, September 24, 8 p.m.

The Southern-rock and heavy-metal musicians of Texas Hippy Coalition will play the Rock Island Brewing Company on September 24, and on the band's TheOutlaw.com Web site, frontman Big Dad Ritch described the group's hit song "Damn You to Hell" thusly: "It has such drive and intensity that it's like a mixed-martial-arts event, like UFC pay-per-view, like someone being grounded and pounded on."

Written by Mike Schulz

Tuesday, 17 September 2013 06:00

As a suggestion of the Texas Hippy Coalition style, that description seems so close to perfect that I'm tempted to just end this piece right there.

Citing influences including Johnny Cash, Molly Hatchet, Corrosion of Conformity, ZZ Top, and Lynyrd Skynyrd – the latter of whom Texas Hippy Coalition opened for in September of 2012 – the band originated in Denison, Texas, in 2004, and was actually formed by three members of ri val bands: Ritch, John Exall, and Randy Cooper. (As the story goes, the musicians met when forced to road-trip together – to separate gigs – from Denison to Dallas and back.) But upon discovering shared musical tastes and talents, the trio began a collaboration, termed their propulsive, Texas-specific rock sound “red-dirt metal,” and eventually produced, in 2008, an independent album titled which quickly inspired a cross-country tour.

Since then, and despite numerous lineup changes over the years, the group has gone on to release two studio albums – 2010's Rollin' and 2012's Peacemaker – and enjoy top-40 hits with the singles “Damn You to Hell” and “Pissed Off & Mad About It.” They've also continued to wow rock and metal fans nationwide with their unrepentantly brash and vitriolic, and occasionally heart-rending, songs. As is stated on one of the band's Web-site descriptions, Texas Hippy Coalition music “is like one of those out-of-control parties that will find you without a girlfriend and with pissed-off family members the very next day, but you'll be gawking over your killer new tattoo while nursing an awful hangover.”

There we go. That one is perfect. I'm officially done here.

Truth & Salvage Co.

Rozz-Tox

Friday, September 27, 9 p.m.

On September 27, Rock Island's Rozz-Tox venue will host an evening with the roots-rock and indie-folk sextet Truth & Salvage Co., and advance tickets are available for $10. I usually wouldn't begin one of these articles with mention of the event's ticket price, but I've read snippets from the group's reviews on its TruthAndSalvageCo.com Web-site, and you should know that at 10 bucks, you're paying roughly one penny per rave.

Originally formed in 2005, and composed of talents from such divergent locales as Georgia, Indiana, North Carolina, Ohio, and Louisiana, Truth & Salvage Co. landed its first big break in late 2008, when Black Crowes frontman Chris Robinson signed its musicians as the first recording artists on his new Silver Arrow label. He also enlisted the group as the opening act for the Black Crowes' 2009 tour, and when Truth & Salvage Co. released its self-titled debut album in the spring of 2010, those who experienced the band's honest, exhilarating Americana stylings quickly realized that Black Crowes-esque career longevity was, for this group, definitely in the cards.

To be sure, this was clear to music critics from the start, and if the Web-site notice from Relix magazine isn't enough to convince you ("Loved this show. Let me re-phrase that: I F---ING LOVED the show."), try these additional Truth & Salvage Co. plaudits on for size.

The San Antonio Express-News praises the band's "rousing mix of roots rock and rollicking country." Music Connection magazines writes, "The songs are upbeat and celebratory, with soaring harmonies and earnest performances."

Blurt

magazines calls Truth & Salvage Co. "upbeat and infectious at practically every turn." The

Sacramento Press

stated, "This scintillating six-piece is a freight-train ride down the Route 66 of American music."

And according to Jamie Beebe at

CWG Magazine

, "I'd like to say that Truth & Salvage Co. is an up-and-coming band about to take the music world by storm, but by the sound of it, they're here, and they brought a typhoon."

So bring your friends, and possibly a few umbrellas, to Truth & Salvage Co.'s September 27 set at Rozz-Tox. More information on the night is available by calling (309)200-0978 or visiting RozzTox.com

Riverssance Festival of Fine Art

What's Happenin': Thursday, September 19, through Wednesday, October 2

Tuesday, 17 September 2013 06:00

Lindsay Park

Saturday, September 21, and Sunday, September 22

If you're at all aware of the Quad Cities' local-art scene, you probably know that the weekend of September 21 and 22 is also the weekend of Midcoast Fine Arts' annual 2013 Riverssance Festival of Fine Art in Davenport's Lindsay Park. And if you know about this eagerly anticipated outdoor event, you probably also know a few other things regarding the Riverssance celebration.

You know, for instance, that the festival sees more than 100 local and national artists – selected through a jurying process – exhibiting a variety of artworks in nearly all media, with paintings, drawings, sculptures, pottery, photographs, clothing, jewelry, glass and wood offerings, and other artistic creations all available for purchase.

You know that wonderful live music always fills the Lindsay Park air, with this year's Riverssance lineup featuring Saturday sets with The Barley House Band, David G. Smith, and Pieces of Candy, and Sunday's musicians including Lojo Russo, Maureen Carter, and Three & a Half Men.

You know there will be excellent food options available for purchase, with the 2013 vendors including LeMeKong, Lagomarcino's, and Bayside Smoothies & More, and wine tastings for ages 21 and older, with this year's samplings arriving courtesy of Jackson County's Tabor Home Vineyards & Winery.

You know there will be make-and-take crafts for kids in Riverssance's children's tent. You know that artists will compete for thousands of dollars in prize money through the "People's Choice" and "Best in Show" citations, and that the award sculpture "The Harley" will be given to an area artist who has demonstrated a lasting commitment to the promotion of visual arts in the Quad Cities, with Nick DiGioia this year's recipient. And you know that every year, Riverssance offers limited-edition collectors' T-shirts.

But! Did you know that this year's T-shirt design is by Jill and Steve Finn? And that they're residents of Glasgow, Missouri? And that the artwork itself is called Dogs Deliver Joy? Well, did you? Did you!? Did?

What? You did? Aw, man ... all that build-up for nothing ... stupid photo captions Anyway. Tickets to this year's event are $4 per day, and more information on the 2013 Riverssance is available by visiting Midcoast.org .

Banned Books Reading

Rock Island Public Library – Main

Tuesday, September 24, 6 p.m.

Psst. Don't tell anyone. But on September 24, Rock Island's Main Public Library and Davenport's Midwest Writing Center will co-host a reading event at the library in conjunction with "Banned Books Week," and as long as you keep this information to yourself, you can Wait. This timid, censorial tone doesn't feel Reader-appropriate at all. Let's try this YO!!! There's gonna be banned literature read at the Rock Island Library on September 24, and if you wimps can't take it, you should just stay home!!!

Okay, and that feels like too much. And I've likely just ensured a few bannings of the Reader, too.

In any case, Tuesday evening's Banned Books Reading will find a number of well-regarded area names reading from some of their favorite pieces of literature – specifically, works that have been challenged or even banned in certain communities. Designed as a very polite middle finger directed at literary censorship, the event will feature readings by library Director Angela Campbell, Midwest Writing Center Executive Director Ryan Collins, Augustana College's Kelly Daniels, St. Ambrose University's Michael Hustedde, and others, with the recognized authors including Lane Smith, Jeanette Winterson, Erin Grundwall, and Alvin Schwartz.

But how familiar are you with these author's offense-giving forebears? Let's find out! According to a 2012 study, as revealed on TakePart.com, which of the following 10 titles have been among the 10 most commonly banned books in American schools?
