Music

Griffin House

The Redstone Room

Thursday, February 6, 8 p.m.

Folk, pop, and acoustic rocker Griffin House plays Davenport's Redstone Room on February 6, and from all accounts, music fans and critics alike are just crazy about the man's Balls.

Which, of course, is the title of the musicians's latest CD.

Which, of course, meant there was no way I was going to open with anything other than a Balls-related joke. (I mean, come on: How long have we known each other?)

What isn't a joke, however, is House's rather incredible ascendancy – over a mere decade and a half – from complete musical novice to acclaimed solo artist and concert headliner. After picking up his first guitar at age 18 and, motivated by his newfound love of music, turning down a golf scholarship, House instead earned a 2002 degree in English literature and writing, and was subsequently encouraged by one of his poetry professors to try his hand at songwriting in Nashville.

I imagine that professor will be the first person House thanks when accepting whatever awards inevitably come his way. Following the release of two independent CDs, the musician made his label debut with 2004's critically acclaimed Lost & Found, an album that led MTV and VH1 music journalist Bill Flanagan to deem him one of the country's finest emerging songwriters. And since then, House has shared his soulful vocals and thoughtful and insightful lyrics with audiences nationwide, touring extensively and opening for the likes of John Mellencamp, Josh Ritter, Patti Scialfa, and the Cranberries.

His most recent release is the aforementioned Balls, a Kickstarter-funded project that has evidently earned the trust (and dough) of fans, with calling it “a beautiful new record” that “should please old fans and new,” and

HuffingtonPost.com

calling House “one of the best musicians out there.” Not bad for a guy whose career inspiration came from writing a song that made his high-school sweetheart weep. “Then I was hooked,” says House on his

GriffinHouseMusic.com

bio. “I thought, ‘Oh, man, if I can make people cry, I’m gonna keep doing this. I’m gonna make as many people cry as I can!’” I know I’ve heard that sentiment before, but House sure doesn’t look like my grade school’s bully

Griffin House performs locally with an opening set by David G. Smith, and more information and tickets are available by calling (563)326-1333 or visiting RiverMusicExperience.org .

Music

Ladysmith Black Mambazo

Englert Theatre

Thursday, February 18, 8 p.m.

If you're familiar with the seminal Paul Simon album Graceland, you're likely familiar with the music-makers of the South African ensemble Ladysmith Black Mambazo, whose gorgeous, soaring vocal stylings can be heard on such classic songs as "Diamonds on the Soles of Her Shoes," "Homeless," and "You Can Call Me Al." And if you're familiar with world music in general, you're definitely familiar with the accomplishments of this thrilling male choral group, whose credits include platinum album sales, 17 Grammy nominations and three wins, and serving as the subjects for the Oscar-nominated documentary short On Tiptoe: Gentle Steps to Freedom.

But while you may know that Ladysmith Black Mambazo's latest tour will find them playing Iowa City's Englert Theatre on February 18, here are a few tidbits about the artists that you might not have known:

What's Happenin': Thursday, February 6, through Wednesday, February 19

Written by Mike Schulz

Tuesday, 04 February 2014 06:00

- The group's first incarnation was founded by Joseph Shabalala in 1960, when the ensemble was named Ezimnyama.
- While "world music" is the catch-all title used to define Ladysmith Black Mambazo's genre, they're principally known for singing in the vocal styles of isicathamiya and mbube.
- The musicians made a national splash in 1967 with a performance on the South African radio program Cothoza Mfana, and released their first three records in 1973: Amabutho, Imbongi, and Ufakazi Tibheshu.
- Their very first album for U.S. release on the Warner Bros. Records label won the Grammy for Best Traditional Folk Recording, and was titled Shaka Zulu.
- And since its inception, Ladysmith Black Mambazo has delivered more than 50 additional albums, with some of the most well-received including 1981's Ulwandle Oluncgwele, 1996's Thuthukani Ngoxolo, and 2010's Kobuye Kulunge.

So a big "Congratulations!" to all of the superb talents of Ladysmith Black Mambazo on creating a music-group touchstone that has endured for more than half a century. And a big "Thank you!" to my editor for all the spell-checking. I'm sure he'll get his revenge somehow.

For more information on Ladysmith Black Mambazo's Iowa City concert, call (319)688-2653 or visiting Englert.org.

Dance

Hammerstep

Bettendorf High School

Saturday, February 8, 7 p.m.

I've heard from certain teacher friends of mine that, as the years go on, it becomes increasingly difficult to keep younger students in their seats. Prior to the group's February 8 public performance at Bettendorf High School, the Quad City Arts Visiting Artists of Hammerstep will spend the week showcasing their skills at numerous elementary schools in the area. Good luck, certain teacher friends of mine. There'll be no keeping those kids seated now.

That is, not if they're moved to move in the manner of Hammerstep, the invigorating, obscenely gifted artists of dance who received huge national recognition with their group's 2013 performance on America's Got Talent. Formed in 2009 by former Riverdance members Garrett Coleman and Jason Oremus (the latter of whom served as the group's principal male dancer for more than four years), Hammerstep is a groundbreaking ensemble that incorporates elements of traditional Irish step, tap, and hip-hop dance to create something startlingly new: a youth-driven explosion of styles that embraces aspects of stage performance and guerrilla street theatre to deliver biting social and political commentary. In gas masks. (Talk about startling.)

What's Happenin': Thursday, February 6, through Wednesday, February 19

Written by Mike Schulz

Tuesday, 04 February 2014 06:00

With the Brooklyn-based group's routines accompanied by a DJ and live band – the musicians for which include Irish fiddle champion Patrick Mangan and Grammy-nominated composer/instrumentalist Dave Eggar – the Hammerstep experience is one that dance-minded audiences of all ages will surely find irresistible, as the artists' international raves easily attest. The Edinburgh Reporter called the group “innovative and entertaining.” The Irish Post wrote, “When it comes to the often conformist world of Irish dance, Hammerstep makes their own rules.” The UK's raved, “Hammerstep's tap routines are like nothing you'll see in the West End.”

BroadwayBaby.com

And after Hammerstep's America's Got Talent audition, judge Howard Stern declared, “Your skill level is so high that you're impossible to ignore.” A description that could be applied to a bunch of my old college friends, if you got rid of that bit about the skill set Donations are encouraged during Hammerstep's public concert at Bettendorf High, and more information on both the group and the evening is available by calling (309)793-1213 or visiting QuadCityArts.com.

Theatre

The Addams Family

Adler Theatre

Tuesday, February 11, 7:30 p.m.

The latest area debut in the Adler Theatre's Broadway series is the musical-comedy smash The Addams Family, which lands in Davenport on February 11. That's a Tuesday, and I gotta admit, the choice of date seems a little weird. Wouldn't a Wednesday have been more appropriate?

Based on the creepy, kooky, altogether ooky creations of Charles Addams – comic-strip characters who inspired the beloved '60s TV sitcom – the Tony Award-nominated The Addams Family features your favorite ghouls-next-door in an original plot involving daughter Wednesday and what transpires after the sullen girl brings her new, “normal” beau and his family to dinner. In other words, it's kind of like You Can't Take It With You if Grandpa were a suave, pale weirdo with a pencil mustache. It's also a chance to see Gomez, Morticia, Pugsley, Uncle Fester, Lurch, and the rest of the gang in delirious song-and-dance mode, which they were for 722 performances during the production's Broadway run.

To get in the mood (snap, snap) for this new show (snap, snap), try your hand at some trivia based on the Addams Family TV series, courtesy of our friends at FunTrivia.com.

1) What language drives Gomez wild when Morticia speaks it?

A) French
