SPRINGFIELD, IL – To ensure that law-abiding gun owners have a voice to defend their Second Amendment rights, state Rep. Mike Smiddy (D-Hillsdale) has joined a new legislative working group designed to lead the conversation about gun rights in Illinois. Smiddy has also signed on as a co-sponsor for HB 997, a bill that would provide guidelines for the concealed carry of firearms in Illinois.

“For too long in Illinois, law-abiding citizens have been denied their basic Second Amendment rights because of a vocal and influential minority,” said Smiddy, a critic of the state’s gun control laws. “This is an opportunity for gun rights advocates to finally play a role in shaping firearms policy in Illinois.

In December, a federal appeals court ruled Illinois’ ongoing ban on concealed carry unconstitutional and gave the state a 180 day deadline to pass a concealed carry bill. While the state’s Attorney General is appealing the decision, gun rights supporters are confident that the ruling will be upheld.

The bipartisan firearms working group, led by Lt. Governor Sheila Simon, is comprised of new lawmakers from all regions of the state and all sides of the gun rights debate. The group will meet with stakeholders and be a vital part of the debate in Springfield.

“Gun owners who have followed the law and played by the rules deserve to have a voice in any proposed changes,” said Smiddy. “I intend to be that voice. I will be a strong activist in this working group to make sure that we’re not left with a watered down version of a concealed carry law.”
