

Ron Paul Remains Competitive Against Obama in Latest Polls

Written by Drew Ivers

Monday, 21 November 2011 15:56

- Download Apple Mac OS X 10.5 Leopard Server
- Buy Excel 2007 Dashboards and Reports For Dummies \(en\)
- Buy Cheap Roxio Popcorn 4 MAC
- Discount - Steinberg Halion 3
- Buy OEM Photoshop CS4: Top 100 Simplified Tips and Tricks
- Buy OEM Ashampoo Photo Optimizer 2
- Buy OEM Dreamweaver CS5 All-in-One For Dummies
- Buy Cheap Propellerhead Reason 4 MAC
- Download Kolor Autopano Giga 3 MAC
- Buy Atomix VirtualDJ Pro 7 \(en\)
- 9.95\$ Excel 2007 Dashboards and Reports For Dummies cheap oem
- Buy Cheap Lynda.com - Photoshop CS5: Portrait Retouching

Paul stays within striking distance of President LAKE JACKSON, Texas – In a new McClatchy-Marist poll, 2012 Republican Presidential candidate Ron Paul comes in 8 points behind President Barack Obama, 49 to 41 percent, and he is one of only three candidates within single digits of the President.

These results immediately follow a Public Policy poll from yesterday, showing Paul 6 points behind Obama, but the only candidate in the GOP field besting Obama among independent voters, 48 to 39 percent.

“This is yet another poll demonstrating the increasing popularity of Ron Paul’s message,” said Ron Paul 2012 National Campaign Chairman Jesse Benton. “Congressman Paul has the ability to remain competitive against the president as his base of support continues to expand to different groups.”

These poll results follow an earlier Bloomberg News poll showing Paul in a statistical first place finish in Iowa, a key early voting state. Also, a late October CNN/TIME poll showed him in the top three in the key states of Iowa, New Hampshire, and South Carolina.

###