WEST DES MOINES, IOWA – Aug. 13, 2013– Justin Palmer of Winterset was crowned the 2013 Iowa Farm Bureau Cookout Contest winner. Palmer beat out 51 other grillers, representing counties from around the state, to win the 50th annual competition. The annual Iowa Farm Bureau-sponsored contest featured outdoor chefs using their best grilling, roasting and smoking techniques. “Every year, we are amazed at the competitiveness and creativity of Iowa’s grillers. Each recipe has been tested and tasted and each one brings out the different qualities and traits of each type of meat,” said Iowa Farm Bureau President Craig Hill. “Iowa’s livestock producers are so proud to raise healthy livestock that provide important sources of protein and inspiration for cooks like the ones at our annual contest.”

Cookout Contest champion, Palmer, won first place in the beef category before being selected by the judges as the overall winner. He received $200, a crown and a permanent trophy as the 2013 Iowa Farm Bureau Cookout Contest Champion.

Other first place winners and their categories were: Helen Schubert of Clarion, lamb; Luke Spencer of Logan, pork; Ashley Hanson of Kamrar, poultry; Sara Cronk of Toledo, turkey; and Gene Petersen of Vinton, combo/speciality. All winners received $75.

Second place winners and their categories were: Andy Grein of Wesley, beef; Bruce Campbell of Marshalltown, lamb; Andy Wilson of Salem, pork; Tracy Christeson of Exira, poultry; Nate Miller of Davenport, turkey; and Mary Weisinger of Ft. Madison, combo/specialty. All second place winners received $50.
